IMPORTANT!

This guide, produced by the Bar of Montreal¹, is intended to be used as a guide only and is not considered to be a comprehensive legal resource. The information provided does not replace a lawyer's advice and cannot teach you everything you need to know.

Contested family law matters are complicated. Although it is your right to represent yourself, you will not receive special treatment by the Courts as a result of your decision. A judge cannot and will not give you any legal advice or opinions. You must know the law and the proper procedure. Even if you do decide to proceed without a lawyer, you should consult a lawyer for the interpretation of the law that applies to your case and for other legal advice.

The information provided in this guide is believed to be correct as at the date of publication in conformity with the provisions of the Divorce Act, R.S.C., 1985, c. 3, the Civil Code of Quebec (C.C.Q.), the Code of Civil Procedure (C.C.P.) and other legislation as it relates to family matters.

THE ROLE OF THE SAFEGUARD ORDERS

Legal proceedings in family law are often complex and are comprised of several steps. For married couples, the different phases of legal proceedings include notably the safeguard order, the provisional measures and a final trial. For common-law spouses, the different phases of legal proceedings include notably the safeguard order and a final trial.

This guide provides step-by-step instructions to oppose an application for an "interim/safeguard" Court order (safeguard orders) which application may include a request for spousal support, child support, parental authority, custody, access and use of the family residence when there is an urgent issue to be resolved.

The objective of the legal process is to settle matters definitively, having studied the global situation of the parties and their children, or the family situation as a whole. To this end, a final trial, takes place in which a judge renders a judgement regarding the rights and obligations of the parties as well as vis-à-vis their children.

Since there are numerous proceedings and other steps which must be completed before the parties may proceed to this final trial, it is possible to ask the Court to render a provisional judgement setting out the rights and obligations to be respected by the parties during the course of their proceedings. This step is considered the "provisional measures" phase of the proceedings.

When appropriate, prior to even reaching a provisional measures phase, the parties may request one or more safeguard orders concerning subjects such as spousal support, child support, custody and access rights, parental authority or use of the family residence. Such orders, the subject of this guide, may be heard by a Court within 10 days and requests for such safeguard orders must clearly announce the conclusions sought.

The Safeguard Order is a decision of the Court on an urgent matter that cannot wait the stage of the provisional measures or of the final trial. As any other Court order, the decision must be followed by the persons named in the order.

It is important to note that the safeguard order is not a necessary procedure. In order for the Courts to render a safeguard order, the requesting party must demonstrate the existence of an urgent situation necessitating the immediate intervention of the Court. In fact, all other requests, regardless of how justified they may be, if they do not possess such urgency, must be addressed during the provisional measures or the final trial, as discussed above.

In summary, the safeguard orders referred to in this guide represent only one of several procedures available during the course of a family law file. The ultimate objective of these proceedings remains the establishment of the rights and obligations of the parties on a definitive basis, by means of a final trial. Meanwhile, the parties may request that the Court determine the modalities to be respected during the proceedings (provisional measures) in cases of divorce or separation from bed and board. During this hearing on provisional measures, the parties may call witnesses. In any cases, if an urgency exists, the parties may request that the Court adjudicate said urgencies by way of a safeguard order.

ALTERNATIVES TO COURT

Not everyone goes to Court to work out the details of a divorce or separation. It is possible to resolve the legal issues of custody, access, parental authority, child support, spousal support and division of property and debt without ever going to Court. You do not need to be friends with the other person to work out your legal issues. What is important is that you both have a common goal, such as finding the best way to parent your children after separation.

CAUTION : Alternative Dispute Resolution is based on equality. It is not counseling, and it is not appropriate where violence or another form of power imbalance is a factor. If either of the partners in a relationship is unable to speak about their personal views or is afraid for their safety or that of their children, a more formal approach to resolving issues may be more appropriate.

Whenever possible, work together to try to come to an agreement before going to Court. You may not be able to agree on every issue and can still go to Court to ask a judge to decide about the things you cannot agree on. When you have settled as much as you can with the other party outside of Court, you are more likely to get a judgment that will work in the best interests of your changing family.

Direct Negotiation, Mediation, Collaborative Family Law and Family Law Settlement Conference are Alternative Dispute Resolution methods.

Prior to starting negotiations, you should always consult a lawyer to understand your rights and obligations. If you need an attorney, do not hesitate to contact the Lawyer Referral Service at the Bar of Montreal at 514 866-2490. You may have a preliminary half hour consultation for a nominal fee of $30.

i.

- Direct Negotiation

Direct negotiation involves talking directly with the other person to find solutions to various legal issues. This could take place wherever both of you are comfortable talking.

Family law issues are adult problems. Do not involve your children in your negotiations with the other party. Always communicate with the other parent directly, never through the children.

i.

- Mediation

In family law matters, mediation involves a neutral third party (mediator) who assists you and the other person in a family dispute to come to an agreement. Mediators help the parties identify and clarify their needs and interests. The mediation process is confidential to enable the parties to speak freely and to direct their efforts towards settlement. Nothing said in this process can be repeated by either party if the case goes to Court or if it is not settled.

If you have dependant children, you may be entitled to up to 5 hours of free mediation with a certified family mediator. You will have to attend the parenting after separation session and may retain the services of a mediator.

- Consult the website of the Barreau du Québec (www.barreau.qc.ca/en/public/trouver/mediateur/index.html) to obtain a list of lawyers in your area who are certified mediators or the Quebec Department of Justice website (www.justice.gouv.qc.ca/english/recherche/mediateur-a.asp) to obtain a list of all the certified mediators in family matters in your area. (CAUTION: Make sure that the mediator accepts the tariff established by the Quebec Department of Justice, if not, you may be required to pay for his or her services.)
- Contact the Quebec Department of Justice (1-866-536-5146, option 4) to attend a parenting after separation information session.

- Collaborative Family Law

This is a process wherein clients and their attorneys agree that they will not go to Court and that they shall work as a team to find solutions which best serve the clients' needs and interests as well as those of the children.

More information is available at www.quebeccollaborativelaw.ca.

- Family Law Settlement Conference

Subject to the consent of the parties, the Courts have the ability to attempt reconciliation between the parties to help them achieve settlements. Once proceedings have been started, the parties may request a Settlement Conference at which time a judge can be designated to assist them in finding a solution to their dispute, like mediation. This process is confidential and nothing said during the conference can be repeated by either party at Court if the case is not settled.

For further information consult the website of the Superior Court of Quebec at www.tribunaux.qc.ca.

A Combined Approach

You may also use a combination of methods to resolve family issues. Some people, for example, use mediation to come to an agreement for custody and access but they have their lawyers help negotiate or go to Court to reach a settlement on how to divide the property. Some people ask a lawyer for advice at the beginning of their separation and to draft a Consent Order or Agreement at the end of the process, but they do all the negotiation in the middle of the process themselves.

When Both Parties Agree

Once you and the other party have reached an agreement, you can file a Consent Order or Agreement with the Court. You should not sign any Consent Orders or Agreements unless you have had a lawyer carefully review it.

At any step in your family law proceeding, you and the other party may come to an agreement. You can sign a Consent Order or Agreement and a judgment can be pronounced which homologates the Consent Order or Agreement. A judge or Special Clerk will review your Consent Order or Agreement. The Court will issue a judgment based upon the consent or agreement. The original judgment will be kept in the Court file and you may obtain a copy of the judgment at Room 1.140 of the Montreal Courthouse. If the judge or special clerk does not homologate the Consent Order or Agreement, you may be instructed to provide more information to the Court (by submitting another sworn statement or other documents) or schedule a trial before the Court.

Helpful Hints on Using Alternative Dispute Resolution Methods

- Information. Understand the law when negotiating a legal agreement. Do your research. Obtain independent legal advice.
- Objectivity. When you cannot agree, think about what a judge would decide based upon the law.
- Relevancy. Stay on topic. Focus on the issues today, not disagreements from the past.
- Communication. Find a way to communicate that works for you, whether it be in a neutral place, over the telephone or by email.
- Calm. Separation can be a very emotional experience. Staying calm will help you to communicate effectively and make thoughtful decisions.
- Listen. Take the time to hear what the other person is saying.

OPPOSING AN “INTERIM/SAFEGUARD” ORDER

Anyone who is able to make a claim under the Civil Code of Quebec or the Divorce Act can apply for a safeguard order. A judge shall decide the safeguard orders dealing with urgent issues such as spousal support, child support, parental authority, child custody, access and use of the family residence. The judge will make a decision based on the information (evidence) provided by both parties and the laws that apply to your situation, including the Regulation respecting the determination of child support payments if children are involved.

Safeguard orders are granted only when there is an urgency. These orders are temporary in nature and granted for a maximum term of six months, which may be extended upon request. This delay permits the parties to file all the necessary documents to proceed to the next step, if necessary.

If you do not agree with what the other party is asking for in the application for a safeguard order, you can oppose their application. The amount of time you have to respond to or oppose an application is indicated in the summons attached to the application you have received. Calculate the response time from the date you were notified. If you do not respond to the application within the time allowed, a judge can grant a Court order by default (without your input). When deciding on child or spousal support, a judge can "impute" your annual income if your Child Support Determination Form or Statement of Income and Expenditures and Balance Sheet and your income tax returns have not been filed.

Parental authority

Parental authority includes all the rights and responsibilities of parents toward their minor children, including making all decisions concerning them. Parental authority is legally granted to both parents, regardless of their marital status. Also, despite separation or divorce, both parents retain parental authority. The custodial parent therefore exercises parental authority on a daily basis, while the other parent must be consulted for important decisions regarding the children.

Following divorce or separation, disagreement may arise between the parents as to the exercise of parental authority. If the parents cannot reach an agreement, a party may ask a judge to settle the matter, such as authorization to travel, consultation for important decisions or communication of important information about the children. For example, when parents disagree, one of them may apply to the Tribunal for an authorization to travel outside the country with the children. It is important to note that this authorization must be granted by the Tribunal to allow you to travel with your children.

Child Support

Child support is a child's right and a parent's responsibility under the law. If children are involved in your family law matter, understand the law before you begin. The Regulation respecting the determination of child support payments ("The Guidelines") came into effect in May 1997. The Guidelines apply when both parties live in the Province of Quebec for children born in a common-law relationship or not. Please note that if in divorce proceedings, one of the parties lives outside the Province of Quebec, the Federal Child Support Guidelines are used to determine child support.

OPPOSING AN APPLICATION FOR AN “INTERIM/SAFEGUARD” ORDER : STEP-BY-STEP

Step 1	Research the laws and rules that apply to your family law matter
Step 2	Prepare and complete all of the required documents
Step 3	Make copies of all of your documents
Step 4	Have your documents duly signed before a Commissioner of Oaths
Step 5	Make sure you have notified your documents on the other party
Step 6	File the documents with a Proof of Notification
Step 7	Wait for a response from the other party
Step 8	Appear at Court for the hearing of the Application for an Interim / Safeguard Order
Step 9	Obtain a certified copy of the Judgment

Step 1 Research the laws and rules that apply to your family law matter

Before you begin, you should research the laws and rules that apply to your situation. A list of resources to which you may refer to understand the law and the procedure required to obtain a safeguard order is available on the website of the Bar of Montreal at www.barreaudemontreal.qc.ca. Read other publications produced by the Quebec Department of Justice and the Fondation du Barreau du Québec.

You should consult a lawyer for interpretation of the law that applies to your case and for other legal advice.

In the province of Quebec, there are different legal rules which apply for married spouses and common-law spouses. You must research the laws that apply to your situation.

i.

The following chart indicates the legislation which may be applicable to your situation.

Divorce
Situation	Divorce Act	Civil Code of Quebec
Married without children	Divorce, Spousal support	Property
Married with children	Divorce, Spousal support, Child Support, Custody, Access	Property, Parental authority

Legal Separation (separation from bed and board)
Situation	Divorce Act	Civil Code of Quebec
Married without children		Property, Spousal support
Married with children		Property, Spousal support, Child support, Custody, Access, Parental authority
Common-law with children		Child support, Custody, Access Parental authority

Child support
Situation	Federal Child Support Guidelines	Provincial Guidelines relating to the determination of child support
Married residing in Quebec		√
Married, one parent not residing in Quebec	√
Common-law with children		√

Any person who applies for custody of children must state that the child is not the object of a decision of a Court nor a pending case before a Court or of any agreement with a Director of Youth Protection.

i.

Laws and regulations that may apply to your separation and/or divorce :

- Civil Code of Quebec
- Code of Civil Procedure
- Act to facilitate the payment of support
- Act respecting income support, employment assistance and social solidarity
- Divorce Act (Canada)
- Regulation of the Superior Court of Quebec in civil matters
- Regulation of the Superior Court of Quebec in family matters
- Regulation of the Superior Court of Quebec in civil and family matters for the district of Montreal
- Tarif of judicial fees in civil matters

All of these laws and regulations can be found at the Quebec or Canada Department of Justice website : www.justice.gouv.qc.ca / www.justice.gc.ca.

Step 2 Prepare and complete all of the required documents

To oppose an application for a safeguard order, you will need to complete forms to file with the Superior Court Clerk with information specific to your case. Some Superior Court forms can be found at the Quebec Department of Justice website (www.justice.gouv.qc.ca). Many forms come with instructions throughout the body of the document on how to fill them out. Please follow them carefully.

If you and the other party were married, you will be required to file the original of your marriage certificate, copy of your birth certificate and that of the other party and an original of your marriage contract, if applicable, if the documents have not been filed.

You will not be required to file your children's birth certificates, unless their filiation is dispute. Then, a copy is sufficient.

Generally, the forms you will need to file when opposing an Application for a safeguard order are :

- (a) Answer;
- (b) Sworn Statements, Exhibits (to respond to the Application for a safeguard order);
- (c) Child Support Determination Form (Schedule 1), if child support has been requested, with all the requested documents;
- (d) Statement of Income and Expenditures and Balance Sheet (Form III of the Regulation of the Superior Court of Quebec in family matters), if spousal support has been requested, with your Federal and Provincial Income tax returns with assessment notices for the last taxation year;
- (e) Sworn statement under Article 444 of the Civil Code of Procedure;
- (f) Attestation of attendance to a parenting after separation information session.

If you have any of your own requests for a safeguard order, you may make your own application for such an order. Please consult the Family Law Self-Help Guide "Applying for an "Interim/Safeguard" Family Order."

i.

The Superior Court File Number assigned to the original Application in Divorce/Separation or Application for Custody and Child Support does not change. Record the number on all your documents.

i.

(a) Answer

If you are opposing an Application for a Safeguard order, you must file an Answer at the Courthouse. The Answer informs the Court that you are the person to be contacted for the file (you are the person "on record").

To download the form to be used by a defendant wishing to answer in a case before the Superior Court and consult the applicable tariff, consult the website of the Quebec Department of Justice at www.justice.gouv.qc.ca/english/formulaires/comparution/sj554-2016-a.pdf.

(b) Sworn Statement / Exhibits (to respond to the Application for a Safeguard order)

The Sworn Statement is a very important document because it contains most of your evidence. It is a written statement of facts sworn under oath as being the truth. Your sworn statement and other documents must be sworn and signed before a Commissioner of Oaths (see Step 4). There are specific rules for preparing a Sworn Statement. Articles 105, 106, 222 and 414 of the Code of Civil Procedure set out the rules when preparing a sworn statement.

In applying for an Interim/Safeguard Order, the other party will file a Sworn Statement in support of his or her Application. If you wish, you can prepare a Sworn Statement in reply to the Sworn Statement of the other party (other Sworn Statements may be filed during the proceeding with permission of the Court). Generally, the other party must be served with a copy of your Sworn Statement 10 days before a trial.

A Sworn Statement is a document that states any information that you wish the judge to know. Be sure that your evidence in a Sworn Statement is complete, accurate, clear and relevant to your application. Dealing with family law matters can be a very emotional experience. When you are preparing a Sworn Statement, remain calm and make logical, factual statements. Stay focused on the issues and avoid denigrating the other party or making comments or stating opinions.

IMPORTANT NOTICE: In a Sworn Statement you can only say things that you know personally to be true or things that you believe to be true (but you must give a reason for that belief). The other party or other party's lawyer can also cross-examine you about anything you include in your Sworn Statement. You must, in all cases, tell the truth and beware of defamatory statements. There are serious legal consequences for not telling the truth or damage the reputation of the other party by false or defamatory statements in a sworn document.

Completing a Sworn Statement

First you must indicate that you are the defendant and complete the information that must be included in every Sworn Statement, such as your full name, occupation and residential address.

Then, begin to list the factual points that you wish the judge to know in numbered paragraphs. Keep each paragraph brief and to the point.

If you are preparing a Sworn Statement in response to an Application or Sworn Statement filed by the other party, you may include (CAUTION! Every situation is different. The list of potential topics provided in this guide is intended as a starting point only):

- Why this is or is not an urgent matter?
- A list of the facts provided by the other party that you agree with, referring to the specific paragraphs of the other party's Sworn Statement;
- A list of the facts provided by the other party that you do not agree with and again you must mention the specific paragraphs of the other party's Sworn Statement;
- Any new facts that you wish the judge to know;
- Any order or orders that you are requesting a judge to grant you.

Documents that support the information or claims you are making in a Sworn Statement are called exhibits. If you have more than one document to file in support of your Sworn Statement, you must prepare a list of exhibits and place consequently numbered tabs on the first page of each exhibit. Each page of each individual exhibit must be numbered consecutively.

Make sure you do not attach any third party testimony in those exhibits. The other party could object to its production, as it is not allowed.

(c) Child Support Determination Form (Schedule I)

If children are involved, this form provides information you wish the judge to know regarding child support only. If you are requesting child support or being asked to pay child support, you must complete the Child Support Determination Form – Schedule 1. The form provides a detailed explanation as to how it should be completed.

You must state your income from all sources and disclose your assets and liabilities. You must attach all supporting documents such as your income tax returns, pay slips and financial statements. Your Child Support Determination Form must be sworn before a Commissioner of Oaths (see Step 4).

To download this form and learn how child support is calculated, consult the website of the Quebec Department of Justice at www.justice.gouv.qc.ca/english/formulaires/modele/forfix-a.htm.

(d) Statement of Income and Expenditures and Balance Sheet (Form III of the Regulation of the Superior Court of Quebec in family matters)

You must complete and file this form if you are requesting spousal support or being asked to pay spousal support. This form provides a judge with some of the information required to decide whether or not support should be paid and, if so, what amount would be fair. You must be truthful when you prepare any legal documents. Be as accurate as possible when stating your income, expenses, assets and liabilities. Follow the instructions when completing the form. It must also be signed before a Commissioner of Oaths (see Step 4).

In the event that you acknowledge your ability to pay the amount of spousal support claimed, but deny that the other party is entitled to receive the amounts claimed, you are not obliged to complete the entire Statement of Income and Expenditures and Balance Sheet. Simply check the space provided for this purpose on the first page of the form.

A model of Statement of Income and Expenditures and Balance Sheet is available on the website of Publications Québec at www.legisquebec.gouv.qc.ca/en/ShowDoc/cr/C.25.01,%20r.%200.2.4.

(e) Sworn statement under Article 444 of the Code of Civil Procedure

Under the Act to facilitate the payment of support, all support must be paid to Revenu Québec, also known as the “Percepteur”. The Percepteur, in turn, pays the support to the spouse. Sworn Statement under Article 444 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be completed and filed at Court every time you ask for support, either for yourself or your children or if your spouse is claiming support from you. This document will be sent to the Percepteur who will collect the support for you. You and your spouse can decide, upon certain conditions, that the Percepteur not collect support.

To download this form, consult the website of the Quebec Department of Justice at www.justice.gouv.qc.ca/english/formulaires/modele/sj766-a.htm.

(f) Attestation of attendance to a parenting after separation information session

Although this document is not necessary to obtain a safeguard order, it must be completed by the trainer and filed with the Superior Court of Quebec in order to proceed to the next step of your legal process. You are required by law to attend this information session unless you are exempted for statutory reasons.

To get informed on upcoming sessions and register in order to attend the session, you may consult the website of the Quebec Department of Justice at www.justice.gouv.qc.ca/english/programmes/mediation/seance-parentalite-a.htm.

Step 3 Make copies of all of your documents

You will generally need three sets of your documents (answer, sworn statement, forms, etc.). Keep one set for your own records, notify one set on the other party and attach one set to the Proof of Notification. You must also provide a copy of your documents to other parties, if applicable.

Step 4 Have your documents duly signed before a Commissioner of Oaths

Bring all copies of your documents with proof of identification with you to be sworn before a Commissioner of Oaths. The following persons may be able to administer oaths: Court clerks and deputy clerks, lawyers, notaries, mayors, clerks and secretary treasurers in all municipalities. At the Montreal Courthouse, you can also attend Room 1.140 to have all of your documents signed before a Commissioner of Oaths.

To find a Commissioner of Oaths, visit the Quebec Department of Justice website at www.assermentation.justice.gouv.qc.ca/ServicesPublicsConsultation/Commissaires/Proximite/Criteres.aspx.

Step 5 Make sure you have notified your documents on the other party

Whenever you file documents or forms with the Court, you always have to notify the other party and the other parties, if applicable, with a copy. Notification of documents on the other party may be made by any appropriate method that provides the sender with proof that the document was delivered. Some pleadings must however be notified by bailiff, including the initial application, and is then called service of documents. The rules are written in the Code of Civil Procedure (article 109 and following).

A fee is charged for the service done by a bailiff. In order to find a bailiff in your area, consult the Chambre des Huissiers de Justice du Québec at www.huissiersquebec.qc.ca.

Give the bailiff original and one copy of all documents that must be served on the other party. The original will be returned by the bailiff with his Proof of Service, where he must swear that your documents have been served to the other party.

Step 6 File the documents with a Proof of Notification

The documents and forms together with the Proof of Notification must be filed with the Clerk of the Superior Court two clear days prior to the scheduled date of trial, to make sure that your documents are in the file on the day of the trial.

Step 7 Wait for a response from the other party

In conformity with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, the other party is entitled to produce a Response Sworn Statement prior to the presentation of the Application for a safeguard order.

Step 8 Appear at Court for the Hearing of the Application for an Interim / Safeguard Order

Bring all your files and supporting documents, as well as a pen and paper with you. Unless a judge specifically asks you, do not bring your children with you to Court.

The Fondation du Barreau du Québec has published "Representing Yourself in Court" to help you prepare for Court. You may pick up a copy at the Courthouse or download it from the website of the Fondation at www.fondationdubarreau.qc.ca.

i.

On the date set for the trial of the Application for safeguard order, you must attend Courtroom 2.17 of the Montreal Courthouse at 9:00 a.m. for the call of the roll. In the Courtroom, you may consult the Court roll which indicates your name and Court file number.

When your case is called, you must tell the Special Clerk that you wish to contest a safeguard order. The case may then be transferred to either Courtroom 2.11 or 2.12 of the Montreal Courthouse. In the Province of Quebec, family law hearings are held in private. Therefore, you are not allowed to go into the Courtroom 2.11 or 2.12 to hear other cases. You must wait in the corridor until your case is called.

When your case is called, you must be prepared to proceed. You will be asked to present your case to the judge. Be prepared to answer questions from the judge. The only facts you can discuss in Court are the ones that are included in your Sworn Statement or the Application or Sworn Statement(s) from the other party.

When you are in the courtroom, some rules of conduct must be respected: it is called "courtroom decorum". You must therefore :

- stand when the judge enters the room or gets up to leave the room and wait to be asked to sit;
- be quiet;
- switch off your cellphone;
- be polite with the judge and the other judicial actors;
- give your answers to the judge, even though the questions are asked by the other party;
- stand when you address the judge;
- dress appropriately (sober and proper clothing).

i.

Step 9 Obtain a certified copy of the Judgment

After the judge has heard all of the representations and arguments, he or she may render a judgment immediately or at a later date.

The judge will make a decision based on the evidence provided by both parties and the laws that apply to your situation, including the Regulation respecting the determination of child support payments if children are involved.

Once the judge has made his or her order, you should obtain a certified copy of the order for your files. Within several days, you can obtain a certified copy of the judgment at the “Division des Jugements” located at room 1.140 of the Montreal Courthouse.

These key words will help you understand some of the legal terms that you may come across as you represent yourself in a family law matter.

These definitions do not replace legal advice from a lawyer on what these terms mean and how they may apply in your situation.

These definitions may be worded differently than the definition in a law or statute so that they are easier to understand. Please note that if there is a conflict between a definition here and what is in a law, the definition in the law applies. This list is not an exhaustive list of all the terms you must know.

Access: Access is the right of parents whose children do not live with them (non-custodial parent), to visit or spend time with their children. A Court order describes the access permitted.

Accessory Measures (Order): (also referred to as Corollary Relief Order) This is a Court order issued on or after the date of divorce judgment. It usually addresses custody, access, child support, spousal support, compensatory allowance, the division of the family patrimony and the liquidation of the matrimonial regime.

Act to Facilitate the Payment of Support: All support payments shall be paid in the manner and according to the terms and conditions prescribed by this Act. Revenu Québec (Percepteur des pensions alimentaires) collects the support payments from the debtor, and pays them to the creditor of support.

Adjournment: When a trial is delayed or postponed, it is called an adjournment.
